SLAVES OF SKOWHEGAN

A more righteous battle against the bosses of capital was never waged than that which the 1,250 employees of the Maine Wood Products Company carried on for over three months. The factory is located near Skowhegan, Me., and its managers and officials, all of whom are close relatives of the wealthy owners of the company, were determined to keep the workers in a state of slavery.

The workers went on strike in protest against the management's refusal to accept a fair wage. The company, however, refused to make any changes in their working conditions. The strike dragged on for over three months, during which time the workers lived on the bare necessities of life.

In the end, the workers were victorious, and the company agreed to make some changes in their working conditions. The strike was a great victory for the workers, and it showed that they were not afraid to stand up for their rights.
INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM

To all workers employed in the Metal and Machinery Industries, such as Engineering, Foundries, Machine Shops, and Metal Workshops. Great care is taken to ensure that every worker is informed about the benefits of union membership. This message is brought to you by your local union representatives.

Fellow Workers—You are undoubtedly aware of the fact that the conditions in your workplace are rapidly deteriorating. The exploitation of the mass of workers is a daily occurrence. The workers are being paid less than the cost of living, and the management is constantly trying to reduce their wages. This is why we are organizing a union to protect your interests.

The union will negotiate with the management to improve your working conditions, and to ensure that you are paid a fair wage. We will also provide legal advice and representation in case of disputes with your employer.

We urge you to join the union and support our efforts to improve the working conditions of all workers in the Metal and Machinery Industries. Together, we can make a difference.

Sincerely,
[Your Local Union Representatives]
